ABSTRACT

AnggiSaputra, (2018): "Group Guidance in Conditional Exemption to Prisoners in State Class II B Pekanbaru Prison".

This study was written based on the need for the implementation of group guidance in parole to prisoners in Pekanbaru Class II B detention center, inmates are someone who is being seized by the right to freedom, because they are considered to have violated a rule set by the government based on the Law. Group guidance is one of the activities carried out in a parole program for inmates who have undergone a minimum of 2/3 or 9 (nine) months of their criminal term from a sentence of more than 1 year 6 months. Group guidance is a structured meeting of counselors and clients, which is carried out in the form of providing understanding of community life, improving self-ability, giving upbringing, as well as direction and encouragement to clients. The purpose of group guidance in parole is to make the client more confident in his life after the client completes his legal term. In this Group Training activity the counselor prepares a variety of materials ranging from equipment, activity material, to time and place. The implementation of group guidance is carried out in several stages, namely the opening, transition, activities, conclusion and closing stages. The research informants conducted in parole at Pekanbaru State Class II B Detention House totaled 4 people, two clients, one counselor, and one prison head of service. The method that the researcher uses in this study is qualitative descriptive with data collection techniques for observation, interviews, and documentation. The implementation of group guidance in parole is very important to prisoners. Based on the implementation of group guidance prisoners have been able to socialize and mingle with people around, whether friends, family or community.
